ABSTRACT:

Most aboriginal lives revolve around depending on their families, but they are regretting showing their families the importance as they have been ignored from later on. The blood bond and sibling abuse went from hand to hand. Changing the narratives of the story only made it worse, as either the children were taken away from the family or killed due to the trauma caused by the whites of that time. Slowly introducing them to the world did not work in the finest ways. Knowing they have no future, no life, they still wanted to strive hard on the outside without any hardships. But later on when the whites started to move out and the community was left helpless because they thought they would be carrying their children on the ship of freedom. Turned into reality, the white supremacist left everyone behind and took only the stolen children to keep them as their slaves.

No apology was given, later on when the people started to talk about it and the grown children realised what they are going through and wanted to tell the world about the situation that their entire life was put into. Especially the major countries like Vietnam had moving places of converting them into Christians for the sake of the religion.

The more they restrained from not changing into the desired religion, for all the efforts taken in the part they faced severe backlash. Once authors like Sally Morgan and Marlee Silva started to publish the book worldwide. The horrendous stories were called fake by the whites even in recent times, later on The Government of Australia issued a public apology for the community. The importance of keeping everyone safe and close has been through all the essays.

INTRODUCTION:

The only goal was to altar and articulate the people of the country to follow one white religion, the program and system was majorly for the poor and underage children just to attract them. The Wyandot tribe took a major place in the culture of identifying new places to work with, more people came up to rescue them but they all got killed on the long run by the vultures of Christian Missionaries, no matter what happens the show kept going on. These people built everything under no guidance of the government. The gods stood aside and saw all the barbaric behaviour under their barbaric elements. The government aided funds were very promising and yet they tried to overkill and over do everything about themselves, many children were kept under the most toxic and sexual conditions in the case who never made.

The mediocre way of providing support and services for the those in need, the government was an fancy service just for the sake of rich people to escape from thepoor.

THE GORE PLACED AND PLAYED

The pheasants of the Military went along with what the government gave up in major manors, the places where growing and glowing with their colours. The bison's where the main source of income and food for the Vietnam community but when the Generals stepped in they started hunting down just for the conversion of major cities into Christianity for the sake of count, they saw how important it was for them to have held the country and land into power. The more people follow Christianity the more money they gained from the pockets of missionary.

kidnapped 2,00,000 children and removed them forcefully from their homes, for developing the Christian Population. Their targets were people living in mountainsand people living in as they had limited access to a lot of life changing things and they were not able to afford most of it. The narratives are always followed by people crying out about their losses, the families had this intimidate thought oflosing themselves into the vague line of default. The first step of the Canadian Missionary was being very warm and welcoming in the first place and no one sawthe behaviour, but the backhanded way of scrolling past into the crowd and sea ofpeople who were killed just for the cause of growing their religion and establishing unbelievable and unbreakable bond among each other, when the people went into suffering because of them, all they cared was how much slavery benefitted them. It was free labour and unemployment among the native communities were peaking at that time, when they all had to beg for food and basicneeds, the missionaries all across the world came to an agreement and united way of accepting that it is fair to provide basic needs and food for the natives instead of paying them decently. Later the hunt of bison was egoistic for them and hence they had to keep running from one another, when the majors and generals moved forward for extra step they were ready to do mass murder of the cattle that has ever existed in the eyes of the natives. But the natives realised there was no use in focusing on money since all the business were run by the Whites and Europeans in almost all cases. They saw how the blacks were starting to get treated by these people so theyalso gave up the right to protest. They saw a change of how they are getting treated as animals. First they decided to starve the natives by hunting down every other animal so the entire community starves and accepts the defeat. Many hunters and poachers were awarded hefty bonuses and rewards for hunting and making the people to suffer. The lower they went the more humanity they started to lose, this amount many people suffered and died due to starvation, apart from stealing children they also killed children who did not cooperate for their evil plans.

Many children were taken away and removed from their families, set on the sea towards the East many children found comfort in strangers as they had no one to talk or set their journey with. The losses of families were creating a huge impact on such young children. They never found who their actual parents are, since they try to escape and find the comfort places, this would create a lot of stress and struggle for the people to work for cost. When they realised child labour was illegal, they tried to legalise this low act, but when we compare morality and legality they both were made up by them for them and not for protecting the people under them.

They more these people got recognised, the more the word spread among themselves as it was more like they found an idea of keeping more money themselves, the lacking self awareness and consciousness was the immediate problem and response which was created.

CONCLUSION:

Every culture holds its own customs and regulations, considering third world countries have majority of men and women working in fields, as many hard workers who were in the same position and countries for counting their jobs, whenever the chance got bigger for them, they included their wives and family, The food that was coming from the bison blood was not needed and the Vietnam Diaspora had many similarities where they both worked mostly in same places, the Whites had a huge range of background skill set to attract these men for lesser salary, the women also moved towards the change for the wellness but they all turned out to be wonderful artists and entrepreneurs for their own sake, they also inspired many rural Vietnamese women to change their lively hoods and create an individuality for them.

The major difference was seen when, women stood for other women and brought them out of their unruly spaces, these unnoticed and unique experiences and changes are brought only by women, unlike men these ladies had little to no support to start with, they had to dig their own pockets and lives for all the way.
